Snowy Paldor Peak climbing

Overview:

"Join us on a trekking and mountaineering experience to Paldor Peak \(5896m\), situated just northwest of Kathmandu and is one of the most popular trekking peaks in the Ganesh Himal region"

John Cleare & Ian Howell first climbed the Paldor Peak in 1974. There are many possible ways to the summit however the popular routes are from the North East, South East, West & South West Ridge. On the summit, you can enjoy stunning views of the Ganesh Himal range after Paldor Peak Climbing. The name Ganesh is taken from the elephant-headed Hindu god of good luck probably the most popular god with Hindus in the Kathmandu valley. Paldor Peak lies at the southeast end of Ganesh Himal marking the junction of the Tiru & Karpu Dandas at the head of the Mailung Khola, a tributary of the Trishuli River. On a clear day the Ganesh Himal, with the icy fangs of Pabil (7,101m), Logsang Karpo (7,150m), Ganesh I (7,406m) & Ganesh V (6,950m) can be seen forming an imposing backdrop to the northwest of Kathmandu when you complete the Paldor Peak Climbing with success..

The quickest approach to Paldor is from Syabrubesi after a 6 to 7 hour drive from Kathmandu. Here the trail meets the Langtang Khola. After crossing the Langtang Khola, the route leads via Tamang to the heritage villages of Tangjet and Gatlang. The route then heads northwards along the ridge before dropping into the forest above Mailung Khola to join up the newly built road that leads to an army post. The moraine filled valley below Paldor Peak is just a day's walk from there. An even more exciting approach is the trek from Sundarjal (on the outskirts of Kathmandu valley) through the hills of Helambu and over the Gosainkunda range to Syabrubesi. We are happy to advise you on your options and plan the trip according to your ideas for the most awaited experience of Paldor Peak Climbing.
