Snowy Naya Kanga Peak climbing

Overview:

"Join us for the Naya Kanga Peak Climbing which is located in the most perfect alpine landscape in the world regarded as the second largest National Park in Nepal named Langtang National Park to experience and explore the nearest peak climbing opportunity from the capital."

Naya Kanga Peak (5,844m) with its other name Ganja La Chuli lays in the lap of the Langtang Region, the most perfect alpine landscape in the world regarded as the second largest national park in Nepal. Langtang National Park has healthy forests of rhododendron, fir, blue and chirr pine and birch. Leopard, musk deer, Himalayan black bear, rhesus and langur monkeys and the endangered red panda are the wildlife lives in the park. The surroundings of Langtang valley are high peaks with great appeal for peak climbing. Naya Kanga Peak is the second offer on this valley to climb after Yala Peak.

The British mountaineer Bill Tillman described Langtang as the most beautiful valley in the world. Since then it has gained its popularity among the nature lovers. In addition, the region is also popular for alpine plants. The valley is dominated by the Tibetan origin Tamang community.

Naya Kanga Peak rises to the west of Ganja La, and is a popular but difficult mountain to climb. The normal route to climb Naya Kanga Peak is a trek through the Helambu Region and a climb via the snowy north-East Ridge. Naya Kanga Peak Climbing rewards the spectacular view of the mountains in Nepal and Tibet like Langtang Lirung (7246m), Lenpo Gang (7083m), Dorje Lakpa (6990m) and mighty Shishapangma (8027m). Easy access to the region and availability of several snow peaks scattered around for acclimatization make this Langtang Region an ideal destination for mountaineers and Naya Kanga Peak Climbing is one of the best choice.
