Dhaulagiri Expedition (8,167m)

Overview:

“Discover the world’s 7th highest mountain located on the Western Nepal with the exclusive arrangements of Snowy Dhaulagiri Expedition with the team of Snowy Horizon professional climbing Sherpa and base camp staffs in Mt. Dhaulagiri (8167m).”

Mt. Dhaulagiri is the 7th highest mountain in the world and 5th in Nepal which is located in the Northwest of Myagdi District in Nepal. “Dhaval” means “White” and “Giri” means “Mountain peak” from Sanskrit is a real giant, which endorse to say the range of White Mountains as Dhaval+giri hereafter called Mt. Dhaulagiri in combined. The real altitude of Mt Dhaulagiri is (8,167m) from sea level. Mt. Dhaulagiri is one of the most formidable peaks to climb. The first successful summit was possible only in 1960 by the Swiss following from the Northeast ridge. This mountain was first sighted by the British surveyors in India in the early 1800s but remained virtually unknown until a Swiss aerial survey in 1949. Five ridges buttress Dhaulagiri I and even up until the early 1980's however only the Northeast ridge had been successfully climbed. Dhaulagiri is considered the most interesting peak among the eight thousand meters mountains in Nepal. In terms of rise above the terrain Mt. Dhaulagiri is unparalleled as it rises 7000m over Kali Gandaki valley with horizontal length of 30km, which by any standard is an impressive statistic.

Mt. Dhaulagiri Expedition:

The vast majority of ascents to date have been via the first ascent route, which is the "Normal Route" on the Expedition of Dhaulagiri. However ascents have been made from almost every direction in this mountain. Dhaulagiri has 5 ridges and south and west faces, which raise about 4000m from their Base Camps, offering opportunities to develop many interesting routes from Italian, Swiss and French camps. There had been over 500 summit ascents and about 70 climbing fatalities on the mountain until 2019 through an unofficial record. One can find the Dhaulagiri Expedition to approach to the summit on its first elevation 8167m, due to its technically challenging routes and lack of big commercial expeditions, one of the most attractive climbing destinations. The expedition can only organized for the seasoned mountaineers who have interest on this formidable mountain.

Snowy Horizon is pleased to offer for our beloved Expedition members to this unforgettable and highly exciting mountain expedition in Mt. Dhaulagiri with the world-class equipped and managed project. Approaches to ABC (Advance Base Camp):

- The approach to the Base Camp is from Pokhara, driving to Beni Bazaar and trekking from there along the Myagdi Khola valley to Darbang and via Bagar, Italy Base Camp to Dhaulagiri Base Camp in spring and driving from Pokhara to Beni and along Kali Gandaki Valley through Tatopani (1189m), Ghasa (2012m) and Marpha (2667m). After Marpha we start trekking to Yak Kharka (3680m) and the Dhaulagiri Base Camp (4700m) via hidden valley in autumn. The trek to the Base Camp takes 4 days with an acclimatization day in Hidden Valley. On the way back we trek only 2-3 days to Jomsom (2710m) and take the flight back to Pokhara for in both seasons.

Climbing Routes:

- Normal route is via Northeast Ridge, the original route climbed by Swiss-Austrian expedition in 1960. Typically 4 camps will be set up for the climbing. The Advance Base Camp is established at 5,300m, just to deposit the gear but it will not be used as an overnight camp due to avalanche danger. Hence the Base Camp 4750m will be used as Advance Base Camp for Accommodation and meal purpose.
- Camp 1 will be established at 5,900m on the Col east from the ABC. Along this trail you will suffer for some avalanche risk as well as crevasses danger. You must be aware of risk and difficulties.
- Camp 2 will be established at 6,400m, which is reached from camp 1 with some steep climbing sections. The ropes shall be fixed and you need some technical climbing experience with the support of your climbing Sherpa. You need 1 technical Ice Axe as usual. When you have private Sherpa it is not mandatory to take 2 technical Ice Axes. One will work.
- Camp 3 (7400m) will be located towards west with steep ice and snow climbing along the ridge of Mountain. Gradually ups and down will be done several times. You climb towards the East Ridge, where you likely experience strong wind conditions before reaching camp 3. This is the most difficult part of the climb.

- From camp 3 we make direct push for the summit and return to camp 3 if the conditions will allow us. With difficult conditions the fallback is to setup bevy at 7,900m in order to attempt another summit push next day.
